Volando bajito Little Low Flying

poetry by

Alicia Partnoy

"I have the utmost admiration for Alicia Partnoy's work and spirit."
—Adrienne Rich

The terse sensuality of these poems, their gentleness and unflinching courage in the face of devastation, of genocide, is so much more than instructive. It is edifying. It is inspiring. It is poetry in its deepest and truest sense. Poetry with the moral imperative of spiritual law. Poetry with the subtlety and insight of our greatest resources, intelligence and compassion. Readers in the United States, a culture which despises and fears defeat as much as it celebrates and adores domination, have much to learn from these poems—among other things, that low flying is a skill to be cultivated, and that the true artistic voice cannot be silenced by guns and tanks and jackboots. Defeated things, if they are tended to, can shimmer, can grow "a pair of crazy feathers" ("Ars . . ."), can scream.

—Gale Wronsky,
from the Introduction

About the Author

Alicia Partnoy is a poet, translator, and human rights activist. She was born in Argentina in 1955 and is one of the few survivors from secret detention camps in which about 30,000 Argentines were 'disappeared'. She is the author of The Little School: Tales of Disappearance and Survival in Argentina (1999); You Can't Drown the Fire: Latin American Women Writing in Exile (1988); and Revenge of the Apple-Venganza de la Manzana: Poetry (1992), and other essays in several anthologies. Partnoy, teaches in the Modern Languages and Literatures Department of Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles.
